TOWN RELIGIOUS CENSUS TAKEN

One-Fifth of the Adult Population of Gettysburg is not Numbered in Church Membership. Interesting Figures Obtained.

One out of every five Gettysburg adult citizens does not belong to a church according to the figures compiled by the religious census takers who covered all parts of the town on Wednesday evening. Eighty enumerators, representing the churches of the town, were scattered over the various streets and practically every dwelling in town was visited for facts and figures. The totals were as follows:

Church members	2014
Unchurched	464
Children, not in Sunday School	983
Children in Sunday School	719
Unbaptized children	122
Total population	4251

Promptly at six o'clock the four score census takers gathered at St. James church and after a short service conducted by Rev. W. B. Hooper were given the few instructions necessary to the work. They were assigned their various territories and at once started to work, returning to the church as soon as it was completed and turning in their data for tabulation by others who were ready for that part of the task.

The enumerators reported courteous treatment at practically every home they visited though a number of people said they could not see any reason for the proceeding. The principal questions asked were whether or not the various members of the household belonged to any church, if not if they had any preference, how many children were in the family and how many attended Sunday School.

At eight o'clock a rally of all the churches of town was held in St. James church. Rev. Frank E. Taylor conducted the service and Irvin L. Taylor led the singing. There were addresses by a number of pastors of town and a letter from Fr. Dougherty was read.

A general campaign for church members will follow the gathering of the data secured on Wednesday evening, the ministers using the information gained from the census to secure members for the various churches of town. Rev. Mr. Baker promised that his church would secure, before July 1, a number equal to the census takers furnished by his congregation—34—and other churches will endeavor to show like activity.

The total of people covered by the census is also of interest. The official 1910 census of Gettysburg gave the population of the town as 4030 while Wednesday evening's census gave it at 4251.

SCHOOL BOARD TO HEAR CASE

High School Boys Allowed to Resume their Studies but Case will Come before School Board at Special Meeting.

The six High School boys who returned from their southern base ball trip several days late have been allowed to resume their studies pending a disposition of their case by the School Board at a special meeting scheduled for Friday evening.

Principal Burgeon on Wednesday afternoon gave the boys an opportunity to explain their prolonged absence and they gave facts and figures to show that when they reached Staunton, Virginia, last Saturday, they were financially unable to come on home. It was accordingly determined to play two games on Monday and these netted sufficient revenue to bring them back to Gettysburg. Train connections were looked into and it was found impossible for the boys to get here before Wednesday.

A careful account of receipts and expenditures kept by the management showed that the boys' story was correct and that at Staunton the treasury contained only about $13 while $25 was required to get home to Gettysburg. When asked why they did not send word to the school authorities as promised the boys said simply and truthfully that the idea never occurred to them.

The demeanor of the six boys in making their explanations was most courteous and respectful and contributed greatly to Prof. Burgeon's decision to allow them to take up their studies. The action of the School Board in dealing with the matter Friday evening will be eagerly awaited.

The base ball team will no longer be known as the High School team but will fill the original schedule as the Gettysburg Athletic Club.

CONFESSES PEN MAR ROBBERY

Herbert Lewis, the 19 year old colored youth who escaped from the cottage of Mrs. George Reacher on a rope ladder last Saturday night, was captured by detectives in Philadelphia Tuesday while trying to pawn a diamond ring belonging to Mrs. Carrie McCabe, who was found dead in her bungalow at Pen Mar.

Lewis confessed to the police that he robbed Mrs. McCabe's bungalow, at Pen Mar, April 30. He denied having had anything to do with her death, stating that she was not about the house when he committed the robbery. Mrs. McCabe was found dead, but with no marks of violence.

Sherman Jackson, who was seen with Lewis in Waynesboro, was found with Lewis in Philadelphia and was also held by the detectives to await the arrival of the officials from Waynesboro, and Constable W. E. Bietzler went after the two with writs for their arrest.

CONFEDERATES WILL ATTEND

Committee Recommends that Southern Veterans Decline Invitation to Attend Fiftieth Anniversary. Report Rejected.

The United Confederate Veterans, in annual reunion at Macon, Georgia on Wednesday accepted an invitation to join with the Grand Army of the Republic in the semi-centennial celebration of the battle of Gettysburg.

The invitation came in a letter from General Trimble, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic.

The Resolutions Committee of the United Confederate Veterans unanimously advised the organization to decline the invitation of the Grand Army of the Republic for the veterans of the South to participate in the celebration but the convention as a whole disregarded the committee's action and speedily accepted the invitation.

The committee held the acceptance of the invitation would be in violation of the constitution of the United Confederate Veterans and that it would be improper for them to celebrate a battle that contributed most to their defeat.

When the matter came up for discussion many declared the breach between the North and South was forever healed, that nowhere in the ranks of the Confederacy could be found animus toward the soldiers of the Union, and that the Gettysburg reunion would forever wipe out what fragment of ill feeling there might possibly be left. The resolution was adopted amid cheers.

MRS. GEORGE F. FELTY

Mrs. Josephine Felty, wife of George F. Felty, died at her home in New Oxford, at 7.30 p. m. Tuesday, May 7, from a complication of diseases, aged 63 years, 5 months and 2 days.

JUDGE PARTNER IN COAL DEALS

Committee Hears Testimony in Archbald Case.

ALLEGED AIDE ON STAND

Tells of Contracts With Railroads and of Coal Dealers Who Refused to Discount Judge's Note and Lost Case.

Washington, May 9.—Charges against Judge Robert W. Archbald, of the commerce court, were unfolded before the house committee on judiciary, which is to determine if impeachment proceedings shall be brought against the jurist.

How Judge Archbald, in partnership with Edward J. Williams, a Scranton coal dealer, while deliberating as a judge on the "lighterage case" to which the Erie railroad was a party, is alleged to have negotiated an option from that railroad for 42,000 tons of culm dump property to be sold at a profit of $12,000, was related to the committee by Williams himself.

Judge Archbald, accompanied by his two sons and his counsel, A. S. Worthington, heard the testimony and occasionally looked at photographic copies of letters bearing on the case, one of them a letter in which the judge told of his connection with the culm bank negotiations in his own words.

In addition to that transaction Williams told of another deal in which he said Judge Archbald acquired an interest in the option on a million acres of Venezuela timber land, for which the judge gave a note for $500. Williams tried to discount this note with C. J. and W. P. Boland, of the Marion Coal company, of Scranton, who at that time had a case pending before Judge Archbald in the federal court. The Bolands refused to discount the note and later lost their case.

Williams admitted telling W. P. Boland that if he had discounted Judge Archbald's note the case might have resulted differently, but he denied that Judge Archbald knew anything of his making such a remark to Boland.

The testimony relating to the culm bank transaction included reference to an assignment by Williams of an interest in the option secured to W. P. Boland and a "silent party," whom he admitted under examination was as a "silent party." Williams said he thought it was not lawful for a jurist's name to be used in such transactions.

Williams related how the option for the culm bank property was negotiated from officers of the Erie railroad and told how a sale for the property was negotiated and that he and Judge Archbald were to divide the profits. Judge Archbald, during the negotiations with the Erie, told him that the lighterage case was then before his court.

"Judge Archbald showed me the briefs in the case," said Williams, "and told me it was about the lighterage case in which the Erie was interested. I didn't know what lighterage meant and he told me. Then he gave me a letter to Mr. May, of the Erie, and also told me that he would see the general counsel for the Erie, Mr. Brownell, about the option."

How the option was given soon thereafter and a deal to sell the property at a $12,000 profit, later frustrated, to the Lackawanna & Wyoming Railroad company, was described by the witness in detail.

Another transaction which the committee did not get to, but will inquire about when the hearing is resumed, involved an alleged transaction for other culm bank property, in which Judge Archbald, a man named Dainty and the Lehigh Valley railroad were said to be interested. This deal, it is said, was interrupted by charges filed with the department of justice against Judge Archbald in connection with the other cases.

Williams told of getting an option on the Katydill culm bank near Moosic, Pa., on the Erie railroad. Williams said no money was turned over in the transaction. After he got the option he went back to Judge Archbald and told him.

"Then Judge Archbald told me," Williams continued, "that he would see Mr. Brownell, attorney for the Erie railroad, about it. When Judge Archbald came back from Washington last September, he said he had met Captain W. A. May, of the Erie, and that Captain May had told him to tell me to come up and he would let me have the culm bank property. I went to see May and he gave me the option." Williams produced a letter from May granting the option.

HE BURNED BOOKS OF WIRE POOL

How Records Sought by Government Were Destroyed.

New York, May 9.—Harry A. Whitney, formerly corresponding secretary in the wire rope department of the American Steel and Wire company, gave startling testimony at the hearing before Commissioner Brown in the government's suit to dissolve the United States Steel corporation, when he told how, acting under instructions from Frank L. Baackes, vice president of the American Steel and Wire company, he destroyed a trunk full of papers and correspondence which related to the business of that concern.

A. C. Severance, of counsel for the steel trust, fought hard to stop the witness' sensational testimony, but former Secretary of War Dickinson, prosecuting for the government, went ahead. He had the witness tell of being ordered by Mr. Baackes in 1911, just after the government indicted the wire pool of which the American Steel and Wire company was a member, to put all "damaging" papers in a trunk and burn them. Mr. Whitney at that time was stationed at Worcester.

"I put in every paper I thought should go into the trunk," said the witness. "Then Mr. Baackes came to Worcester. 'Frank,' said he, 'I want you personally to see that these papers are destroyed.' I took the trunk to the cellar and put the papers under the boilers."

"What did those papers consist of?" asked Mr. Dickinson.

"They included the Wire association agreement and the price agreements or pools," responded the witness.

"By the Wire association agreement you mean the minutes of the meetings held by the Wire association at which the prices were fixed?"

"Yes; they were the pool papers and minutes."

NO ACTION TO SAVE RICHESON

Believed Governor Will Take No Steps to Prevent Execution of Slayer.

Boston, May 9.—The plea of Clarence V. T. Richeson for commutation of the death sentence for the murder of Miss Avis Linnell, was not taken up at the meeting of the governor's council.

Edward S. Hamlin, executive secretary of the council, made this statement after the council had adjourned its session.

"The general opinion among the members of the executive council as a result of the meeting is that Governor Foss will take no action whatever in the Richeson affair."

Unless Governor Foss does act, Richeson, who was a minister, must die in the electric chair in the week beginning May 19.

Convicted of Murder.

New Haven, Conn., May 9.—George Redding, Jr., aged twenty-three years, one of the well known young men about town, was convicted of murder in the first degree. He shot down a young Hebrew fruit dealer, Morris Greenberg, of New Haven, whom he had inveigled into the woods north of the city on the pretext that he would sell him apples at a bargain. Robbery was said to be the motive for the crime.

Underwood Carries Mississippi.
 Jackson, Miss., May 9.—Oscar W. Underwood defeated Governor Woodrow Wilson by a decisive majority in the Democratic presidential primary in Mississippi Tuesday, according to figures compiled.

Mrs. Astor Reported Engaged.
 Paris, May 9.—The rumor is again current here that Mrs. Ava Williams Astor, formerly of Philadelphia, who divorced Colonel John Jacob Astor, is engaged to be married to Maurice Rostand.

FOUR SHOT IN MINE RIOT

Minersville Mob Fights State Police.

WOMAN HIT WITH BRICK

Pitched Battle Between Constabulary and Mob Results in Three Persons Being Perhaps Fatally Wounded.

Pottsville, Pa., May 9.—In a pitched battle between the state police and a crowd estimated at between 2000 and 3000 men at Minersville four men were shot and three were probably fatally wounded.

It is believed that a dozen or more others were also struck by bullets, but were not seriously wounded and did not seek medical attention.

A woman, Mrs. George Well, who was standing on her porch, was hit on the arm by a brick and was painfully injured. It was at first reported that she had been shot also.

The men who are thought to have been fatally hurt are:

David Davis, who was shot through the body.

Two foreigners, not identified by the authorities at this time.

Another foreigner was shot through the leg and was seriously wounded.

The fight occurred on Fourth street in the central part of the town and came as a result of a crowd assembling in front of Ulmer's garage, the electric light plant, to prevent the superintendent, George W. Keiser, of the Pine Hill Coal company, from taking two men in his automobile to his colliery.

Superintendent Keiser had been coming to Minersville the past several days and taking Thomas Parry, a republican, and William Ward, a pump man, to work in his automobile.

The miners determined to prevent him from taking the men, and at an early hour a big crowd assembled in front of the garage. When Keiser called for his machine he was warned not to take it out, and was practically held a prisoner at the place.

Chief Burgess Richard Levan addressed the crowd and demanded that they disperse peacefully, but no attention was paid to his warning. He thereupon requested the state police barracks at Pottsville to send a detachment to Minersville to assist in preserving order.

Three officers, who make daily patrols of that section, arrived on the scene and shortly after were reinforced by four more from the Pottsville barracks. They ordered the crowd to disperse, but their orders had no effect. Under their guard the automobile was then taken from the garage and was being cranked, when someone in the crowd threw a brick. It struck a policeman on the head.

It seemed to be the signal for an attack and immediately there came a shower of stones, followed by several pistol shots. The officers then fired a volley into the ground. The crowd paid no attention. Raising their fists, they twice fired into the air, but the only effect it had was to draw shots from the crowd. The officers then turned their weapons into the crowd and commenced firing.

The shots were returned and a regular pitched battle followed, when it is estimated that a hundred shots were fired, which soon ended in the crowd dispersing, leaving four lying on the ground. David Davis was taken into the garage and physicians were summoned. They pronounced his wound as one which would probably result fatally. The three foreigners were carried away by friends and taken to nearby saloons, where medical attention was also summoned and little hope was expressed for two of them.

There are now thirty troopers at Minersville. It was announced that when additional reinforcements arrive the entire foreign section of the town will be put practically under martial law for a time until a thorough search is made of every house and every foreigner is disarmed.

A pathetic incident of the shooting of David Davis is that his wife is in a dying condition as a result of the shock. She had been seriously ill for several days, and when she learned of the accident to her husband, who was just an onlooker, although in the crowd, she collapsed. Neither is expected to survive. Davis was shot through both lungs. One of the foreigners who will die has been in the country only two weeks. He was also shot through the body.

George Owen, who was shot at the Lincoln colliery as a result of an altercation because Owen persisted in working during the suspension, died at the Pottsville hospital. Stephen Fabley, accused of the shooting, was formally charged with murder and was committed to prison on that charge.

The state police have full control of the situation at Shenandoah and Mahanoy City, and as a result of a thorough patrol of the outskirts of those towns there was no interference with men on their way to work, although there were very few who reported.

MANILA'S OLD FORT

SANTIAGO WAS BUILT MORE THAN 300 YEARS AGO.

Key of City's Vast System of Defense Constructed by the Spaniards Is Now Used as Military Headquarters.

A score of miles down the bay from Manila, right at the very front door of the archipelago, lies hidden on Corregidor Island a veritable hornet's nest of masked batteries. According to the Overland Monthly, these batteries make the Port Arthur placements of yesterday seem like mere old-fashioned toys, and paper ones at that.

The Gruson turrets, made of concrete and steel and sunk on rock foundations, natural or artificial, in the deep, resembling huge gray turtles sticking up out of the water with protruding gun barrels for necks, occupy El Fraile and other small islets in the vicinity, while old hump-backed Corregidor is covered from crest to shore line with guns, a honeycomb of underground cement tunnels, pits and runways, wireless equipment, electrical apparatus, searchlights and other contrivances to aid in repelling an enemy.

When it comes to age and romantic history, however, old Fort Santiago is far ahead of Corregidor. Manila's walled city, a town in itself, consisting of several city blocks with paved streets, business houses and large dwellings is surrounded by a stone wall about thirty feet high and from thirty to forty feet thick.

The walls once were skirted on the outside by a deep moat, filled with water having drawbridges at the various gates. Most if not all of the moat has now been filled in, but no doubt the walls will stand for years if for no other reason than for their historical interest.

Of this vast yet crude system of defense Fort Santiago stands as the key. What the Tower of London is to England, what the Vatican is to Rome, what the Bunker Hill monument is to the United States, Fort Santiago is to the Philippine Islands.

The Spanish invaders made Manila their headquarters in 1571 and began to fortify it about twenty years later. The first stone construction was the circular wall, which is still standing. Since the American occupation of the fort its armament has been taken away and the buildings within the park have been converted into barracks and storerooms.

Commodious office buildings have been erected on top of the walls along and overlooking the Pasig, and here the commanding general of the Philippine division has his headquarters. In one of the beautiful parks within the fort is located the military arsenal, with its big steam and electric workshops.

Some of the maps and plans of the fort are now in the British museum, in London, where they were carried after the British conquest of Manila. The fort, mostly in its present form, has stood for 300 years. There are all sorts of stories floating about concerning secret chambers in the walls and wings.

So far as the secret chambers are concerned, there is some truth in the rumors. The filling of the old moat closed many of the entrances to these chambers, probably forever. When the wall in Calle Aduana was removed, an inner chamber was found filled with human skeletons.

Natives have a wholesome terror of the old place, and absolutely no desire to see anything below the surface of the thick old walls. Americans who, with electric lamps, have started explorations have given up, owing to the foul air, crumbling passages and other hindrances.

Only three flags have flown above Fort Santiago. For 328 years the Spanish ensign was unfurled to the tropic breeze, except for the brief time the British flag supplanted that of the rightful lords. The hoisting of the third flag is well known to all Americans.

Undoubtedly Genuine.

The mistress observed one morning that her dusky butler was wearing a ring with a setting almost large enough for a beacon light, if it had possessed the proper brilliancy. Later in the day she chanced to hear a conversation between the butler and the maid.

"Am dat a genuine dimont yo' is sportin', Jake?" the maid asked, suspicion and hope about equally balanced in her tone.

"Am dis a dimont?" reproachfully. "Does yo' 'spose I'd buy anything else fo' a 'gagement ring? Huh! dis am a dimont an' it am gold what it sets in."

"Ef yo' mean you bought it fo' me, yo' will have to tell the price fo' I'll believe hit's a dimont. I wuz fooled once wid a brass ring, an' I don't mean to be caught again."

"Cose hit's a dimont, Lucy. Hit cost $250."

"Well, gimme here. Long as hit am a genuine dimont I'll 'cept it fo' a 'gagement ring."—Housekeeper.

Waging a War.

Fourteen million dollars was spent in this country last year in the war against tuberculosis. In comparison with the small amounts expended for the same purpose only a few years ago this sum seems vast. In reality, it is not nearly so large as it should be. The organized effort now being made in every state of the Union to stamp out tuberculosis is commonly referred to as a war, and quite properly so. It is a war waged against an insidious enemy that takes greater toll of life than is taken in actual warfare. Yet in these days $14,000,000 would not go far in financing even the smallest of real wars that may come. Why should we not spend more in carrying on a great war which is already here and which has as its objective something more important than the acquisition of territory or the protection of the honor of a king?

HOME TOWN HELPS

SCHOOLS OF TOWN PLANNING

Man Who Adds to Beauty of City Is Given Encouragement in Europe.

Ancient Athens and Rome set us an example of civic centers in the Acropolis and the Forum.

Frankfort, says the New York World, purchased a number of medieval buildings near the city hall and restored them to the original style that they should be in harmony with it.

Berlin has a school of town planning.

Germany has experts like Stueben, Fischer, Gurlert, Henricl and Baumeister, who give advice on town planning and travel from city to city. It is a new profession—"stadtebau."

Frankfort has built an exposition hall about the size of Madison Square garden.

Munich has a group of exposition buildings comprising an auditorium, a theater, a hall for exhibits and a summer concert garden.

When a new street is opened in Brussels or Paris, prizes running as high as $4,000 in Brussels and equal to one-half the street tax in Paris are offered by the authorities for the most artistic facades.

Vienna remits a percentage of taxes to landlords who will tear down an old building and put up a bigger and better one.

Copenhagen gives a prize every year to the architect who designs the most slightly building and best harmonizes with the older buildings about it.

Paris requires that all office and house fronts shall be periodically repaired or repainted, so that the street shall appear neat and fresh.

All wide Paris streets are in effect parks. They have rows of shade trees. Many of them have a central park strip planted with trees, grass and flowers, and benches are placed there. Along the chief streets are perhaps 100,000 trees, a large number for a city so compactly built.

In practically all European cities pavements are kept constantly in good repair.

All those European cities whose good government has something to teach America are managed not by politicians but by experts.

SCHOOL GARDEN GREAT HELP

Supplies Initiative and Responsibility Lacking in Child Who Goes to Work Early.

Those who have made a thorough study of the subject have found that the children who leave school early, for hard work, are of little value to their employers, because of a lack of initiative and proper sense of responsibility. No home training in this line is given them at any age, and in this the school garden may be of great help.

After a child has laid out his garden with tape or other measure, drawn it to a scale, laid out each small allotment for several sorts of plants, fertilized and dug over and smoothed out his little garden, he has well defined ideas and knowledge concerning lines and their length, relationships; and of areas, volumes, etc. A knowledge of the amount of seed he sows, weighing, measuring or even estimating the subsequent crop and computing its money value has in it all the fundamentals of a business education. Add to this the study of soils and their formation, effects of heat and moisture and the many other points developed in school garden work, and you have largely made over the once comparatively blank brain space into a practical working machine.

For Protecting Green Cement.

After laying a new concrete sidewalk it was not long since the custom to protect it from marring while it was still soft by spreading over it tar paper, which was held down by sticks laid across it or perhaps by light stones laid on it here and there, a not altogether satisfactory method, for under these light and unevenly placed weights the paper was likely to shift or to blow up in places. But nowadays while it is hardening the new pavement is protected in a much more perfect manner by spreading over the tar paper that has been laid upon it a uniform thin layer of sand, this being one of the innumerable improvements, large and small, characteristic of modern ways of doing things.

Electric Fans Prevent Frost.

To the long list of the means heretofore proposed of protecting fields, orchards, and vineyards against frost a new one has recently been added by a French scientist. He points out the fact that frosts are not feared when the wind blows; he is thus led to suggest the creation of an artificial wind by the installation of electric fans among the plants to be protected. He considers this plan applicable chiefly to vineyards, but also possibly useful in orchards.

Variety of Tone.

"The presence of the Flindings lends considerable tone to our neighborhood."

"Stylish eh?"
 "Well, not exactly. One of the daughters is taking singing lessons; the oldest boy practices several hours every day on the trombone and the Flindings twins are always crying."

It Wasn't a Dream.
Archbishop Thompson was greatly surprised when he was given the archdiocese of York. He had been suffering acutely from toothache and upon medical advice had resorted to narcotics. After a particularly bad night he set out for his doctor, though his wife had besought him not to submit to further narcotics, as after them he was "not himself" for some hours. On the way he met the postman, who handed him a letter announcing his preference from Gloucester to York. He rushed back and burst excitedly into the house, the toothache all forgotten. "Zoe, Zoe," he cried, "what do you think has happened? I am archbishop of York!" "There, what did I tell you?" rejoined his wife. "You've been taking that horrible narcotic again and are quite out of your head."

SUPPOSED DEAD GIRL HOME

Atlantic City, May 9.—After a search for her had been made in vain for several months, Dorothy Widlansky, seventeen years old, reappeared at her parents' home.
Explaining her disappearance last November, the girl declared she had sloped with a young physician to San Diego, Cal.
The girl left her home one afternoon ostensibly to purchase a coat. Her continued absence led to the suspicion that she had been murdered. The family gave up the quest a month ago, after expending all of their savings.
The girl came home as the family was seated at the supper table. She was well dressed and wore jewelry. Friends said the young physician she married is wealthy and had sent his bride to her home in Atlantic City while he went to Europe for a year's study.

Ptomaine in Ice Cream Fatal.
Philadelphia, May 9.—After being unconscious for twenty-four hours Ethel Lewis, twenty-one years old, of 2149 Montrose street, died at her home. Several days ago, after eating some ice cream, Miss Lewis and her sister and two brothers became ill. The sister and brothers recovered, but Ethel's condition grew steadily worse until Wednesday, when she died. Her death was caused by ptomaine poisoning.

Baby's Arm Crushed in Wringer.
Lebanon, Pa., May 9.—While his mother was absent Henry Zug, the three-year-old son of Ephraim Zug, a Prescott farmer, set in motion a motor operating a wash machine and wringer, and was caught by the arm. Nearly an hour elapsed before the father could be brought to the home to smash the wringer with an axe. Amputation may be necessary if the boy survives the shock.

Negro Attacks Girl in Coatesville.
Coatesville, Pa., May 9.—For the fifth time within a period of six months Coatesville experienced the excitement attending the attack of a colored man upon a white woman, when seven-year-old Lillian Hasen, a clerk in one of the local department stores, was attacked on her way home from work. The attack occurred in the center of town and the colored man escaped because Miss Hasen was so over-ome that she was unable to tell her story until several hours later.

Ignorance.
Lew Morris, a Kansas City character of local renown, was standing on the corner of Thirteenth street and Grand avenue one Sunday morning when a polite stranger accosted him:
"Would you kindly tell me, sir, how to find the Second Presbyterian church?"
"God bless me, stranger," fervently responded Lew, "I don't even know where the first Presbyterian church is!"—Everybody's.

$50,000.000 IN FLOOD DAMAGE

Government Experts Fear It May be Double That.

FRESH BREAK IN LEEVE

While Thousands of Persons Have Been Rescued, Many More Are Awaiting Aid.
New Orleans, May 9.—Owing to the favorable weather of the past forty-eight hours, apprehension of further breaks in the Mississippi levees was somewhat less and reports of receding waters were received from various points.
However, there was a break in the levee at the junction of the Old River and the Mississippi, five miles below Torras. The crevasse is about 100 feet wide.
With the slight improvement in conditions estimates of the damage are being made. Some of them reach $50,000,000, and it is said this sum may be doubled before normal conditions are restored.
Attention of the officers has now been centered in the work of rescue being carried on in the inundated regions by motor boats, barges and skiffs, manned by government employees. Fourteen more lives have been sacrificed to the flood. Twelve negroes were drowned when a raft capsized in the Battle Ax district of Point Coupee parish.

Two women were drowned when their ship, which was being towed by a government boat, capsized.
Twenty thousand persons have already been rescued in Louisiana and as many more are anxiously awaiting aid. Some are floating on the tops of houses, others in tree tops, while scores are huddled on the levee tops or on little patches of high ground which the waters have not covered. For days they have been without food, and as the women and children are brought in medical aid is needed immediately.

Oettsworth, La., is in grave peril and efforts will be made to rescue its inhabitants in boats. The water is reported to be rising there rapidly and the town is almost in the direct path of the torrent pouring through the levee gap. Already the people have fled to the upper stories of their homes and the live stock has been driven from the surrounding country.
Troops from New Iberia followed the example of those at Marksville and rounded up all idle negroes at New Roads and forced them to work on the levees.
The Baton Rouge university professors, in charge of an employment bureau under the supervision of the relief committee, took similar action. The sawmill and plantation owners are also sending negroes employed by them to work on the dikes. Citizens of New Roads were elated over the order to the cruiser Nebraska to lend aid in the rescue work.

Scores of men have offered to pilot gasoline boats from the Nebraska to assist in the work of rescue.
Maringouin and Grossette are now islands. Both of these towns are built on high ground, but the water has completely surrounded them and it is impossible to get either in or out. The bridge on the Texas Pacific was swung to prevent its being carried away.
Signs of cheer over reports of receding water were shortlived among those working to alleviate the suffering of the refugees. The most alarming reports were received to the effect that meningitis had broken out in several of the relief camps.
Hundreds of persons who had escaped the turbulent waters were said to be in danger of perishing from disease.

ALLEN'S DEFENCE OPENS

Commonwealth Rests Case Against Accused Mountaineer.
Wytheville, Va., May 9.—With the examination of four witnesses, the commonwealth rested its case against Floyd Allen, charged with the murder of William M. Foster, prosecutor of Carroll county, in the Hillsville court room last March.
Counsel for Allen called as the first witness for the defense John W. Faris, a farmer, who was a member of the jury which found Allen guilty at the trial at the end of which the tragedy occurred.
Faris testified that he saw Sheriff Webb fire his pistol at Allen as soon as Allen jumped from his chair when the sentence was pronounced.
Cross-examined, Faris admitted he had heard two shots before Sheriff Webb started to shoot. He said they came from where he had seen Sida and Claude Allen.

MRS. KNOX ROBBED OF $2000 IN GEMS

Marine Charged With Theft During Tour.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 9.—A marine aboard the cruiser Maryland is under arrest, according to information received here, charged with having robbed Mrs. Phillander C. Knox, wife of the secretary of state, of diamonds valued at more than $2000.
The secretary and his wife have been on the Pacific coast for some days, the occasion of the visit being a governmental mission of the secretary. The cruiser Maryland has been the Knoxes' official home.
The gems were stolen from Mrs. Knox during the tour of the secretary and party in Central America. Several of the diamonds were recovered from a pawn shop. They will be sent to Mare Island to be used as evidence when the marine is brought to trial.
During the Central American tour of the Secretary and Mrs. Knox their official ship was the cruiser Washington, and the inference is that the marine charged with the robbery had been transferred from that vessel to the Maryland, on which he was placed under arrest, according to the report.
W. L. Coombs, secretary to Mr. Knox, said at San Francisco when he was asked to confirm the theft of Mrs. Knox's jewels, that their value had been exaggerated. The department of state at Washington had notified Secretary Knox, he said, that the jewels had been recovered, but had given no details.

The PAIGE is NOT a $2000 Car

We repeat, it is not a $2000, nor a $2500 car. We have no desire to make exaggerated statements about the Paige. We want you to know the truth about the Paige. And find out the truth about other cars selling for Paige prices or thereabout.

This is the truth about the Paige. It is the best automobile—judged by any standard—that you can buy for $975 and $1000—a well-designed, honestly built car, comfortable, speedy and enduring.

Don't buy your new car until you have gone all over the Paige—studied it in every detail of construction—compared it carefully with other cars selling at Paige prices—ridden in it. Bring an expert with you—if you aren't an expert on automobiles. The more a man knows about automobiles the more he appreciates the Paige.

CHAPTER XXIX.

The Raft Again.

Yancy and Cavendish threw themselves on the sweeps and worked the raft clear of the keel boat, then the turbulent current seized the smaller craft and whirled it away into the night; as its black bulk receded from before his eyes the Earl of Lambeth spoke with the voice of authority and experience.

"It was a good fight and them fellows done well, but not near well enough." A conclusion that could not be gainsaid. He added, "No one ain't hurt but them that had ought to have got hurt. Mr. Yancy's all right, and so's Mr. Carrington—who's mighty welcome here." The earl's shock of red hair was bristling like the mane of some angry animal and his eyes still flashed with the light of battle, but he managed to summon up an expression of winning friendliness.

"Mr. Carrington's kin to me, Polly," explained Yancy to Mrs. Cavendish. His voice was far from steady, for Hannibal had been gathered into his arms and had all but wrecked the stoic calm with which the Scratch Hiller was seeking to guard his emotions.

Polly smiled and dimpled at the Kentuckian. Trained to a romantic point of view she had a frank liking for handsome, stalwart men. Cavendish was neither, but none knew better than Polly that where he was most lacking in appearance he was richest in substance. He carried scars honorably earned in those differences he had been prone to cultivate with less generous natures; for his scheme of life did not embrace the millennium.

"Thank God, you got here when you did!" said Carrington.

"We was some pushed for time, but we done it," responded the earl modestly. He added, "What now?—do we make a landing?"

"No—unless it interferes with your plans not to. I want to get around the next bend before we tie up. Later we'll all go back. Can I count on you?"

"You shurely can. I consider this here as sociable a neighborhood as I ever struck. It pleases me well. Folks are up and doing hereabout."

Carrington looked eagerly around in search of Betty. She was sitting on an upturned tub, a pathetic enough figure as she drooped against the wall of one of the shanties with all her courage quite gone from her. He made his way quickly to her side.

"La!" whispered Polly in Chillis and Fever's ear. "If that pore young thing yonder keeps a widow it won't be because of any encouragement she gets from Mr. Carrington. If I ever seen marriage in a man's eye I seen it in his this minute!"

"Bruce!" cried Betty, starting up as Carrington approached. "Oh, Bruce, I am so glad you have come—you are not hurt?" She accepted his presence without question. She had needed him and he had not failed her.

"We are none of us hurt, Betty," he said gently, as he took her hand.

He saw that the suffering she had undergone during the preceding twenty-four hours had left its record on her tired face and in her heavy eyes. She retained a shuddering consciousness of the unchecked savagery of those last moments on the keel boat; she was still hearing the oaths of the men as they struggled together, the sound of blows, and the dreadful silences that had followed them. She turned from him, and there came the relief of tears.

"I Was Quite Peevish After He Threw Me in the River."

"There, Betty, the danger is over now and you were so brave while it lasted. I can't bear to have you cry!"

"I was wild with fear—all that time on the boat, Bruce—" she faltered between her sobs. "I didn't know but they would find you out. I could only wait and hope—and pray!"

"I was in no danger, dear. Didn't the girl tell me I was to take the place of a man Slosson was expecting? He never doubted that I was that man until a light—a signal it must have been—on the shore at the head of the bayou betrayed me."

"Where are we going now, Bruce? Not the way they went—" and Betty glanced out into the black void where

The keel boat had merged into the gloom.

"No, no—but we can't get the raft back up-stream against the current, so the best thing is to land at the Bates' plantation below here; then as soon as you are able we can return to Belle Plain," said Carrington.

There was an interval broken only by the occasional sweep of the great steering oar as Cavendish coaxed the raft out toward the channel. The thought of Charley Norton's murder rested on Carrington like a pall. Scarcely a week had elapsed since he quitted Thicket Point, and in that week the hand of death had dealt with them impartially, and to what end? Then the miles he had traversed in his hopeless journey up-river translated themselves into a division of time as well as space. They were just as much further removed from the past with its blight of tragic terror. He turned and glanced at Betty. He saw that her eyes held their steady look of wistful pity that was for the dead man; yet in spite of this, and in spite of the bounds beyond which he would not let his imagination carry him, the future, enriched with sudden promise, unfolded itself. The deep sense of recovered hope stirred within him. He knew there must come a day when he would dare to speak of his love, and she would listen.

"It's best we should land at Bates' place—we can get teams there," he went on to explain. "And, Betty, wherever we go we'll go together, dear. Cavendish doesn't look as if he had any very urgent business of his own, and I reckon the same is true of Yancy, so I am going to keep them with us. There are some points to be cleared up when we reach Belle Plain—some folks who'll have a lot to explain or else quit this part of the state! And I intend to see that you are not left alone until—until I have the right to take care of you for good and all—that's what you want me to do one of these days, isn't it, darling?" and his eyes, glowing and infinitely tender, dwelt on her upturned face.

But Betty shrank from him in involuntary agitation.

"Oh, not now, Bruce—not now—we mustn't speak of that—it's wrong—it's wicked—you mustn't make me forget him!" she cried brokenly, in protest.

"Forgive me, Betty, I'll not speak of it again," he said.

"Wait, Bruce, and some time—Oh, don't make me say it," she gasped, "or I shall hate myself!" for in his presence she was feeling the horror of her past experience grow strangely remote, only the dull ache of her memories remained, and to these she clung. They were silent for a moment, then Carrington said:

"After I'm sure you'll be safe here perhaps I'll go south into the Choctaw Purchase. I've been thinking of that recently; but I'll find my way back here—don't misunderstand me—I'll not come too soon for even you, Betty. I loved Norton. He was one of my best friends, too," he continued gently. "But you know—and I know—dear, the day will come when no matter where you are I shall find you and not lose you!"

Betty made no answer in words, but a soft and eloquent little hand was slipped into his and allowed to rest there.

Presently a light wind stirred the dead dense atmosphere, the mist lifted and enveloped the shore, showing them the river between piled-up mass of vapor. Apparently it ran for their raft alone. It was just twenty-four hours since Carrington had looked upon such another night, but this was a different world the gray fog was unmasking—a world of hopes, and dreams, and rich content. Then the thought of Norton—poor Norton—who had had his world, too, of hopes and dreams and rich content—

The calm of a highly domestic existence had resumed its interrupted sway on the raft. Mr. Cavendish, associated in Betty's memory with certain ear-splitting manifestations of ferocious rage, became in the bosom of his family low-voiced and genial and hopelessly impotent to deal with his five small sons; while Yancy was again the Bob Yancy of Scratch Hill, violence of any sort apparently had no place in his nature. He was deeply absorbed in Hannibal's account of those vicissitudes which had befallen him during their separation. They were now seated before a cheerful fire that blazed on the hearth, the boy very close to Yancy, with one hand clasped in the Scratch Hiller's, while about them were ranged the six small Cavendishes sedately sharing in the reunion of uncle and nevy, toward which they felt they had honorably labored.

"And you wan't dead, Uncle Bob?" said Hannibal with a deep breath, viewing Yancy unmistakably in the flesh.

"Never once. I been floating peacefully along with these here titled friends of mine; but I was some anxious about you, son."

"And Mr. Slosson, Uncle Bob—did you smack him like you smacked Dave Blount that day when he tried to steal me?" asked Hannibal, whose childish sense of justice demanded reparation for the wrongs they had suffered.

Mr. Yancy extended a big right hand, the knuckle of which was skinned and bruised.

"He were the meanest man I ever felt obliged to hit with my fist, Nevy; it appeared like he had teeth all over his face."

"Sho—where's his hide, Uncle Bob?" cried the little Cavendishes in an excited chorus. "Sho—did you forget that?" They themselves had forgotten the unique enterprise to which Mr. Yancy was committed, but the allusion to Slosson had revived their memory of it.

"Well, he begged so piteous to be allowed to keep his hide, I hadn't the heart to strip it off," explained Mr. Yancy pleasantly. "And the winter's comin' on—at this moment I can feel a chill in the air—don't you all reckon he's going to need it to keep the cold out? Sho, you mustn't be bloody-minded!"

"What was it about Mr. Slosson's hide, Uncle Bob?" demanded Hannibal. "What was you a-goin' to do to that?"

"Why, Nevy, after he beat me up and throwed me in the river, I was some peevish to a spell in my feelings for him," said Yancy in a tone of gentle regret. He glanced at his bruised hand. "But I'm right pleased to be able to say that I've got over all them oncharitable thoughts of mine."

"And you seen the judge, Uncle Bob?" questioned Hannibal.

"Yes, I've seen the judge. We was together for part of a day. Me and him gets on fine?"

"Where is he now, Uncle Bob?"

"I reckon he's back at Belle Plain by this time. You see we left him in Raleigh along after noon to 'tend to some business he had on hand. I never seen a gentleman of his weight so truly spry on his legs—and all about you, Nevy; while as to mind! Sho—why, words flowed out of him as naturally as water out of a branch."

Of Hannibal's relationship to the judge he said nothing. He felt that was a secret to be revealed by the judge himself when he should see fit.

"Uncle Bob, who'm I going to live with now?" questioned Hannibal anxiously.

"That pint's already come up, Nevy—him and me's decided that there won't be no friction. You-all will just go on living with him."

"But what about you, Uncle Bob?" cried Hannibal, lifting a wistful little face to Yancy's.

"Oh, me?—well, you-all will go right on living with me."

"And what will come of Mr. Mahaffy?"

"I reckon you-all will go right on living with him, too."

"Uncle Bob, you mean you reckon we all are going to live in one house?"

"I low it will have to be fixed that-a-ways," agreed Yancy.
